

I just hired an attorney ...

Now what?

- We know workers' compensation claims can be stressful but try to sit back and relax! You are in good hands!
- Now that you have hired IWLF to assist with your workers' compensation case, we are in the process of opening your file, requesting the necessary documentation (medical records, accident reports, witness statements, wage information, and so on), and informing all parties involved that we are representing you. This process can take several weeks but we want to let you know that we are always proactive for our clients. And, even though workers' compensation can be a very slow process, we do everything in our power to move things along as quickly as possible.
- Once we receive all of the appropriate documentation, your attorney will evaluate your claim and, depending on the status of your case, they may be working your case up for settlement, preparing your file for a hearing, corresponding with your medical providers, or conducting research as to what the next move should be. Again, we will move things along as quickly as possible but these things do take some time.
- Your attorney & paralegal will meet EVERY week about your case to update each other on any new circumstances and collaborate on the strategy for your case. Even if you have not spoken with your attorney directly, they are aware of the situations you are dealing with and, if there is anything you need to be informed of or if there is any information we need from you, our office will contact you.
